Texas sues Pfizer for “conspiring to censor the vaccine’s critics”

Pharmaceutical giant Pfizer faces another new lawsuit filed by Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton, who says the company unlawfully misrepresented its so-called Wuhan coronavirus (COVID-19) "vaccine" while "attempting to censor public discussions of the product."

In a press release, Paxton's office alleges that Pfizer violated the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act by engaging in "false, deceptive, and misleading acts and practices by making unsupported claims regarding the company's COVID-19 vaccine."

According to Paxton, Pfizer's claim that its mRNA injection – which skeptics say is actually a "modRNA" injection under another name – is 95 percent effective at eradicating COVID is "highly misleading."

"Pfizer's widespread representation that its vaccine possessed 95% efficacy against infection was highly misleading from day one," the lawsuit states. "That number was only ever legitimate in a solitary, highly technical, and artificial way – it represented a calculation of the so-called 'relative risk reduction' for vaccinated individuals in Pfizer's then-unfinished pivotal clinical trial."

The suit goes on to discuss publications from the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) that misleadingly indicate "relative risk reduction" statistics that "unduly influence consumer choice." (Related: CDC warns latest COVID-19 "variant" BA.2.86 infects the FULLY VACCINATED, admitting the vaccines don't work.)

Pfizer COVID jabs caused "negative efficacy" in many areas

Pfizer's clinical trial data covers a span of just two months and involved just 162 participants out of 17,000 who actually got jabbed with the company's COVID injection. This is hardly a large enough pool to properly and accurately gauge the jab's effectiveness.

"Based on those numbers, vaccination status had a negligible impact on whether a trial participant contracted COVID-19," the lawsuit states. "The risk of acquiring COVID-19 was so small in the first instance during this short window that Pfizer's vaccine only fractionally improved a person's risk of infection."

The lawsuit further states that, in some places in late 2021, Pfizer's vaccine actually had "negative efficacy." What this means is that a greater number of fully jabbed people still tested positive for COVID compared to unvaccinated people, while other places noted fresh spikes in COVID rates despite more people getting jabbed.

"How did Pfizer respond when it became apparent that its vaccine was failing and the viability of its cash cow under threat? By intimidating those spreading the truth, and by conspiring to censor the vaccine's critics," the lawsuit says.

"Pfizer labeled as 'criminals' those who spread facts about the vaccine. It accused them of spreading 'misinformation.' And it coerced social media platforms to silence prominent truth-tellers. Indeed, Pfizer even went so far as to request that social media platforms silence a former FDA director because his comments could 'driv[e] news coverage' critical of the vaccine."

In a separate statement, Paxton explained that he is filing the lawsuit on behalf of all Texans, including the millions who were coerced by tyrannical vaccine mandates to "take a defective product sold by lies."

"The facts are clear," he added. "Pfizer did not tell the truth about their COVID-19 vaccines. Whereas the Biden Administration weaponized the pandemic to force illegal public health decrees on the public and enrich pharmaceutical companies, I will use every tool I have to protect our citizens who were misled and harmed by Pfizer's actions."

Paxton's lawsuit was filed after a lengthy investigation into not only Pfizer but also the other leading COVID jab manufacturers that pushed deadly experimental drug products on the public.
